2020/02/07

Hello MrWillis! We are proud that someone recommended us as specialists in wireless threats that mean that our advices help people and we are useful. Now let's get back to your Wi-Fi issues. The problem is in that, that a hacker that connects wireless network can access it without getting into a building, because Wi-Fi signal spreads rather widely. You may try to find out who the hacker is by looking at the broadband speeds of connected users. Connection speed of a hacker, accessing from the street will be much lower. Now, let's get to protection. There are a lot of ways for hackers to get into wireless network. Also they can access a wired network through a wireless one. Jammers-Store can provide you only one 100% solution. To protect your corporate network you should ban the usage of wireless connections. But keep in mind that just active Wi-Fi module in some executive's laptop can be a gateway to your network. So it will be better to install a powerful Wi-Fi jamming device to expel the threat of hacking. Thank you for your question and stay safe!
